TRANSLATION NOTES

MAVORTE SCANS

The kanji used for Eithne is 永遠夜, and it's made up of the kanji for eternity (永遠) and the kanji for night (夜). Hence, meaning eternal night. I think the previous TL already explained why he chose to romanize Enya as Eithne.
(page 5)

Lucio here uses 殺す, but the furigana reads オトす, which could mean "falling into sin" or "to win one over".
(page 6)

"Original suicide girl" actually uses 原初, which means "origin" or "starting point". So, literally, it should be something like "the starting point suicide girl". I was debating between using "original" or "first", but I opted for "original" in the end.
(page 10)

The furigana for "demon" read as "phobia", so I put it there with lower opacity since I felt it was important. I'm not sure if this looks okay though, so tell me if I should change it and just leave it as a TL note instead.
(page 12)

The "known" here could also mean "to know" in the biblical sense. The kanji used is 交わる (to join; to associate with; to have a sexual relationship).
(page 13)
